Last month SLTP Utama team entered for a tug-of-war (tarik tambang) contest with SLTP Bangsa. Two weeks before the contest the boys of "SLTP Utama team" started practicing hard. "We must learn to pull the rope together at the same time." said Amin, their team leader. "Only then will our team be strong".

On the day of the contest the team from SLTP Bangsa arrived at SLTP Utama in a bus. Everyone was surprised to see, that these boys were much taller and bigger than the boys of SLTP Utama. "We'll surely lose," said Rano, a member of SLTP Utama

"Don't give up so easily," said Amin. "We must try our best".

Soon the contest began. Which team do you think won the contest? It was SLTP Utama. It was too strong for the SLTP Bangsa team. Why was that so? You see the SLTP Utama boys pulled the rope together at the same time. SLTP Bangsa boys, on the other hand, were not united at all.

Newspapers are just what their name says. They are papers that print news. They first appeared in the 1400s just after printing began. Printers produced pamphlets telling people what was happening in the country and what they thought about it.

Modern newspapers first appeared in the 1700s. Today, there are newspapers in almost every country in the world, in many different languages. Some are printed everyday, some are every week.

One of the oldest newspapers is The Times which is printed in London. It began in 1785 when it was called the Universal Daily Register. It changed its name to The Times in 1788.

Our country, Indonesia, also has a lot of newspapers. There are 94 newspapers in Indonesia. The publishing is concentrated in large cities. Jakarta has 24 dailies with half the total national circulation. Manado has 15 dailies, Medan has 12, and Surabaya has 9.

The national news agency of Indonesia is Antara (Lembaga Kantor Berita Nasional Antara). It has domestic bureaus in thirty two provincial capitals and six foreign bureaus. Antara is an independent news agency.
